Together, we've engaged in collaborative projects on impactful themes such as climate change, reducing carbon footprints, the historical impact of British rule in India, and the exploration of English poets – all in alignment with UN Sustainable Development Goals. The dedication of both schools' leadership teams has been instrumental in ensuring the sustainability and success of this enduring partnership. We look forward to continuing our collaborative efforts and creating more meaningful connections in the future.

"Bridging Horizons: U.S. Delegation and Anjuman I Islam Celebrate the Transformative Power of MIT Collaboration" Mumbai, January 16, 2024

In a monumental stride towards educational innovation, Anjuman I Islam's Educational Institutes have embarked on a transformative journey with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Boston. This ground-breaking collaboration, which was recently brought into the spotlight during the visit of the U.S. delegation led by His Excellency, Ambassador Eric Garcetti and Consul General Mike Hankey, is revolutionizing education in Anjuman I Islam. Dr. Zahir I. Kazi, the Hon'ble President of Anjuman I Islam, provided an overview of the institution's rich 150-year legacy and its journey so far. He highlighted the remarkable benefits of the MIT collaboration, particularly in enhancing departments like engineering, finance, and K-12 education. As Anjuman-I-Islam marks its 150th anniversary, it embarks on an unprecedented journey of educational transformation. Anjuman I Islam, a beacon of learning and progress since its inception, forged a dynamic collaboration with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Boston, one of the world's most prestigious universities a year ago. The collaboration with MIT centers around the MIT J-WEL program. This initiative focuses on empowering educational leaders, students and institutions globally to revolutionize the quality of education. The partnership has yielded significant benefits for both students and faculty at Anjuman-I-Islam, providing them with access to cutting-edge research, global networking opportunities, and innovative educational methodologies. A delegation of six distinguished faculty members from Anjuman-I-Islam played a pivotal role in this collaboration. During their visit to MIT, Boston they engaged with experts and gained insights into the MIT J-WEL program, laying the groundwork for educational endeavours. The faculty members, with their diverse expertise, are instrumental in implementing the new initiatives and ensuring the success of this partnership. Under the visionary leadership of Dr. Zahir I. Kazi, President of Anjuman I Islam, and the current management team, the institute's collaboration with MIT extends beyond the realms of conventional education. This partnership, part of the MIT J-WEL initiative, is reshaping not just the Artificial Intelligence and STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts, and Mathematics) curriculum but is also making significant strides in departments like Engineering, Finance, Management Studies, and Pharmacy and K 12 Department . This multifaceted collaboration is set to redefine educational standards across various disciplines. The U.S. delegation's visit illuminated the depth of this collaboration. A round table discussion with the management and Anjuman's core team of 6 faculty members who have initiated MIT inspired various programmes at different institutes showcased a commitment to absorbing and implementing global educational best practices. Faculty members shared insights from their engagements with MIT experts, highlighting the transfer of innovative methodologies to their respective fields. The delegation was captivated by an exhibit of student projects in Artificial Intelligence and Robotics. These projects – prototypes, apps, and websites – were not just a display of technical skill but a testament to the practical application of an education enriched by MIT's influence. This segment of the visit underscored the institute's commitment to nurturing creativity and innovation among its students. The visit concluded with the delegation observing MIT-inspired STEAM and Artificial Intelligence lessons in grade six classrooms. This part of the tour provided a glimpse into how theoretical knowledge is being translated into practical skills, preparing students for the challenges of a rapidly evolving, technology-driven world. This collaboration marks a new era for Anjuman-I-Islam's Educational Institutions. It promises to provide a unique platform for students and faculty to engage with a world-class institution. The initiative aligns with Anjuman-I-Islam's mission to create global graduates who possess a blend of technical skills, critical thinking, and creative problem-solving abilities. As Anjuman I Islam marks its sesquicentennial, its collaboration with MIT is not merely a milestone but a visionary leap, intertwining a rich heritage with the forefront of educational innovation. This alliance is a testament to a future where education transcends traditional boundaries, fostering a new cadre of leaders and innovators. It symbolizes a commitment to nurturing minds that are not only well-versed in their legacy but are also equipped to sculpt the future, thus positioning Anjuman I Islam as a crucible of global education, shaping individuals ready to make impactful contributions to society and the world at large.
